

Product recall of gym rack - used in products for small children under 10 months.

Why are we recalling this product and what is the hazard?

During our continual quality control, we have found that our internationally recognized test laboratory, has made an error whilst testing our gym rack.

The laboratory has made an incorrect age assessment, which was not in accordance with the expected use of the gym rack, and this means that they have concluded that the gym rack "passes" in the test, even though they have failed to test for some relevant requirements.

Therefore, in special cases it can happen that if a child, who cannot sit by him-/herself and therefore lies on his/her back under the rack, gets one of the legs into the mouth - then the leg may press on the neck.

It must not be able to do that, and therefore we are now recalling the gym rack.

What should I do?

If you have bought and used a gym rack for children who cannot sit by themselves, then for safety's sake stop using the product for the child.

Alternatively, you contact the place of purchase for a refund.
